TRIFLES.

A cloud may intercept the sun, A web by insect-workers spun, Preserve the life within the frame, Or vaporstake away the same.
A grain of sand upon the sight
May rob a giant of his might;
Or needle point let out his breath, And make a banquet-meal for Death.

How often, by a single word, How often, by a single word,
The heart with agony is stired;
And ties, that years could no'er have riven,
Are scattered to the winds of heaven?
A glance, that looks what lips could speak,
Will spend the pulse and blanche the cheek;
And thoughts, nor looked, nor yet expressed,
Create a chaos in the breast.

A smile of hope from those we love My be an angel from above; A whispered welcome in our cars, Be as the music of the spheres, The presure of a gentle hand. Worth all that glitters in the land. Oh, trifles are not what they are, But Fortune's ruling voice and star.

THE DAYS WE WORE NO CRINILINE.

"AIR .- The days when we went gipseying." Oh! the days we were no criniline, A long time ago; When we along the streets could walk In comfort with each beau, Ere hoops and springs, and such like things, On ladies' forms were seen; Ere fathers raved and husbands stormed

About the criniline. Ere wicked wags with cruel jokes, Could cause us care or woe; in the days we wore no criniline; A long time ago.

Our hearts were light, we felt no fright
Through growds to wend our way;
But now we're jammed and knocked about
Where'er we chance to stray.
With friends we then could sail in boats,
On streamlets bright and fair,
But now our dresses are so large There is no room to spare.

And then we hear the rascals say, 'It was not always so,
In the days they were no criniline,
A long time ago.'

We then could pass each country has Without a single sneer; But now by fashion we're compelled These horrid hoops to wear; Then lovers came with joyous hearts Our cavaliers to be; To lead us up and down the town,

The things and sights to sec.

But now they laugh and run away; It was not always so— In the days we wore no criniline, A long time ago.

If ever common-sense should reign O'er fashion's changing scene, We then may dress as once we did, And imitate a queen. The men, also, they must adopt
A more becoming mein;
And if they will not lead the way, Farewell to criniline.
Then we no more shall weep and say It was not always so, In the days we were no criniline,

A long time ago.

She was still comely in features, graceful in form, but few could call her a handsome or an accomplished woman; for alas! all orther characteristics were overshadowed by this repulsive trait. Yet she loved to see others neat, and her house ways look. As a housekeeper she exknowledging to himself the unwelcome sloven woman.
